Full Verbal Description:

End portion of a mano. All worked portions are smooth and moderately ground. The apparent working surface has a light gloss. It also has striations, but these seem to come more from the nature of the vesicular basalt than from use. The mano gets thicker from end to middle: The ^{finished} end is 5.6×6.2 , the broken end is 5.9×7.4 . So the increase is in both dimensions: width and thickness. The cross-section is like a "D".

Drawing of broken end.
